Format:
Bespoke training

CPD:
12 hours for your records (depending on your requirements)

Certificate of completion

Course overview

Interpersonal skills are not just 'nice-to-have' but are 'must-haves' for any successful pharmaceutical project manager.
These skills complement the technical aspects of project management, making you not just a manager, but a leader.
The course combines theoretical knowledge with practical exercises tailored to real-world pharmaceutical project management.
Topics include communication strategies, stakeholder management, conflict resolution, emotional intelligence, cross-functional team management, and effective collaboration. Investing in these skills will not only make you more effective in your role but also contribute to a more successful and harmonious work environment.

Benefits of attending

By the end of this course, participants will:

- Develop effective communication strategies for diverse stakeholders
- Understand the dynamics of cross-functional collaboration in pharmaceutical projects
- Learn conflict resolution techniques specific to high-stakes environments
- Build emotional intelligence for better team engagement and performance
- Cultivate leadership and influencing skills to enhance project success

Who should attend?

This course has been specifically designed to address the needs of pharmaceutical and biopharmaceutical professionals, as well as those in the medical device, animal health and other life science industries.

The programme will benefit both newly appointed and established project team leaders and managers wishing to refresh or update their skills.

Reviews

I found this training very useful. I specifically liked the topics related to emotional intelligence and communication, understanding each other to improve collaboration and also the fact that it was not directed toward project management tools but very people-oriented and related to communication techniques and stakeholder management from a soft skills point of view..
