Course overview

Managing the pharmaceutical supply chain is a complex process involving stages of sourcing raw materials, manufacturing medicines, and delivering them to patients. The process requires proper storage and transportation at different stages, as inadequate compliance with various good practices and regulations can impact product quality.

Ensuring the safe and effective distribution of pharmaceutical products involves multiple stakeholders, requiring efficient coordination and handling. Third-party logistics (3PL) suppliers play a vital role in enhancing supply chain efficiency and reducing costs, allowing manufacturers to focus on their core operations.

This course will focus primarily on compliance with regulatory requirements and good practices for the storage and distribution of pharmaceutical products, specifically in the context of 3PL suppliers.

Benefits of attending

- Understand the basics of pharmaceutical supply chain and its stakeholders
- Enhance your knowledge of various regulatory and best practices followed during storage and distribution of pharmaceutical products
- Learn about of the latest compliance trends and challenges in the pharmaceutical 3PL industry

Who should attend

This course is ideal for professionals in the following industries:

- 3PL
- Pharmaceuticals
- Biotechnology
- Medical Devices
- Life Sciences (especially those involved in storage and distribution)

Additionally, it is well-suited for professionals in 3PL, pharma, and related industries who want to understand the fundamentals of the pharmaceutical supply chain. The course also benefits anyone looking to stay updated on the latest regulations and industry trends affecting the pharmaceutical 3PL sector.
