1 hours for your records

Certificate of completion

Overview

In this FREE lunchtime session, explore how lessons from elite sport translate into effective leadership, business success, and personal development. Drawing on his business career achievements as CEO at LexisNexis Risk Solutions and lived experience as a footballer, Dean Curtis shares practical insight into performance, mindset, resilience, and the transferable skills developed through sport. The session blends real-world storytelling with actionable leadership principles and concludes with the opportunity for Q&A.

Key themes include maintaining a focus on performance rather than short-term results, building strong team culture, and recognising how the discipline, adaptability, and competitive mindset gained through sport can support leadership, entrepreneurship, and career transition beyond athletics.

Benefits of attending

- Gain leadership insights grounded in elite sporting experience
- Learn how focusing on performance drives sustainable results
- Understand how strong team culture supports success in any field
- Identify transferable skills from sport applicable to business and leadership
- Build confidence in navigating career transitions or new challenges
- Reflect on personal leadership style and performance mindset

Who should attend?

This session is ideal for:

- Senior leaders, managers, and aspiring leaders
- HR, Learning & Development, and talent professionals
- Teams interested in high-performance culture and collaboration
- Entrepreneurs and professionals seeking leadership inspiration
- Athletes approaching retirement or transitioning from sport who want to understand how their skills, discipline, and competitive experience can transfer into business, leadership roles, or entrepreneurship
- Anyone interested in applying sporting principles to leadership, teamwork, or career development

Reviews

The content was excellent - very relevant and exactly what I was hoping for. It was not boring at all and held my attention throughout. Dean was superb. Very engaging, spoke clearly and at a good pace.
